

INNOVATION & THE RETIREMENT LANDSCAPE

Key insights from our Annual Retirement Plan Survey indicate that plan participants prioritize Innovation, track record, and the simplicity of the Nasdaq-100®.

Nearly 80% of 1,000 surveyed report that having access to a Nasdaq-100 Index product is important.

Approximately 20% ranked the option as extremely important.

Almost 45% of the participants already report owning a product that tracks the Nasdaq-100 in their portfolio.

Responses were consistent across all age bands surveyed.

The rest of the world has already adopted the Nasdaq-100 Index for their equity market exposure, so why haven't retirement plans addressed this opportunity? Currently, there are over $300 billion in assets tied to the Nasdaq-100 benchmark, but very little is found in 401(k) plans.*

Addressing growing 401(k) participant demand, the Nasdaq-100 Index Fund (NQQQX) presents a powerful opportunity for today's DC offerings.

The Institutional share class has an expense ratio of 0.27%, which is 64% lower than the average of its Morningstar peer group.

Nasdaq performance over time

	Nasdaq-100 Index	S&P 500 Index	Outperformance for Period
5 years	150.65%	96.85%	53.80%
10 years	447.23%	242.05%	205.18%
20 years	1447.81%	616.41%	831.40%
30 years	6189.33%	2136.44%	4052.89%

$10,000 invested in the index would have grown to $155,346 in the Nasdaq-100 Index, vs. $71,750 in the S&P 500 Index for the 20-year period ending 12/31/24.

"This survey supports what we've all seen in the marketplace," said Steve Rogers, CEO of Shelton Capital Management. "Money has poured into funds tracking this index, especially the Qs, and in plans we oversee, the Nasdaq-100 Index option is as popular as the S&P 500 Index. Investors like what this index does, so of course, respondents want it in their 401(k).

Furthermore, I suspect the slow adoption is employer apathy, and possibly a lack of candor on behalf of employees who aren't comfortable raising criticisms about benefits. It's clear people are buying index funds tracking this benchmark in their IRAs and personal accounts."
